Presents a cast of 21 show creators who talk about writing and selling hit television series. They discuss writing spec scripts; first jobs in TV; getting an agent; being staffed as a writer; writing a pilot; putting yourself in the characters you create; and more. This book is useful for screenwriters, television writers, and TV fans.

21 top TV showrunners share their industry experiences . . . simple and informative primer on how to succeed as a TV writer. -- VARIETYCreated By answers the question of how to break into television . . . it also explains how to write a 'spec' script. -- SCRIPT MagazineFrom the Inside Flap"The stellar line-up of creative minds in this book represents the top talent in this business. Prigg brings out the best in them." --- Aaron SpellingFrom the Back Cover"If you've ever wondered how your favorite television show was created, wonder no more! This book, a collection of interviews with today's best TV show creators, takes you behind the scenes and into their creative minds." James Burrows "Steven Prigg has given us a great look at today's television creators. These men and women shape American culture with their works. It is wonderful to hear what influenced them, how they broke into the business, and what it takes to create and sell television in the vertically integrated network marketplace of today." Stephen J. Cannell
