the Memoirs of J. W, Davison, Forty Years Music Critic of the Times (Classic Reprint):

Excerpt from Music During the Victorian Era, From Mendelssohn to Wagner: Being the Memoirs of J. W, Davison, Forty Years Music Critic of the Times As to the third movement, that which found its chief manifestation in the work of Richard Wagner, he regarded it as subversive of the true principles of art, the principles laid down by Bach and Handel, Gluck, Haydn and Mozart, the principles developed by Beethoven and followed by Weber, Spohr and Mendelssohn. He combated the new ideas to the last, when to do so had become a losing fight. Davison in his earlier days had rather an attraction for controversy. There was pleasure for him in standing up for friends and Opinions; there was enjoyment in the mere exercise against some obstinate adversary of his favourite weapon of bantering irony. He was by nature a humorist, somewhat recklessly gay or quaintly sentimental. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
