NPR : NPR American Chronicles: Exploring Space before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised NPR American Chronicles: Exploring Space:

From the competitive spirit ignited by Sputnik to the tragedies and triumphs of the Apollo missions, from the technological leap forward created by the Space Shuttle to the global cooperation forged by the International Space Station and beyond, NPR examines the inspirational story of modern space exploration and the extraordinary individuals who made it possible. Featuring in-depth profiles of landmark missions, along with interviews and commentary from voices that have lived the dream, including astronauts John Glenn, Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin, Bernard Harris, Sally Ride, and many more.

Anyone interested in both history and the space program will enjoy this collection of news reports, interviews, and recollections. . . . [Palcas] voice is friendly, accessible, and informative, and he paces himself so that we can follow his reports. AudioFile
