Five Stars By Barbara Williams Awesome! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Only a little over three hours in this set of cd's I experienced a great deal of personal academic and emotional review. By storyteller Listening to the stories, letters and voices of the first ladies was a treat. In interviews conducted by NPR, we were given snippets and glimpses of the first ladies and their lives celebrating and reviewing their causes, passions and roles while they served as first lady. Some of the interviews provided confirmation of things I already knew and others gave insights to the behind the scenes lives and choices of these special and famous women. There was a very short musical phrase between each interview which provides the reader a chance to move to the new interview with greater ease than might have been possible with straight dialogue. Only a little over three hours in this set of cd's I experienced a great deal of personal academic and emotional review., listening to the stories caused me to rethink and remember information and opinions that I had gained or formed over the years. I would highly recommend listening to this book. I give it a 4 stars .

While the role of the first lady has changed dramatically over the course of the nation's history, one thing remains constant: American's have always been fascinated by the wives of the President. Insights into their formative years, their daily routines within the White House, their influence on the public policies espoused by their husbands, and their bold journey into the modern political spotlight have captivated generations of political historians, social critics and tabloid gawkers alike. NPR presents the story of these iconic women as they apply their unique gifts to help transform the role of women in public and private life. Featuring in-depth profiles of many of our beloved, inspiring, and occasionally enigmatic first ladies, including: Martha Washington, Eleanor Roosevelt, Jacqueline Kennedy, Lady Bird Johnson, Betty Ford, Hillary Clinton, Laura Bush, Michelle Obama and more.
