NPR : NPR Holiday Favorites before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised NPR Holiday Favorites:

More good stories By Sunny Sue Another gift given at Christmas time, this CD entertained many family members. Always recommend listening to NPR stories no matter what time of the year it is. 4 of 6 people found the following review helpful. Not fave -- just random gathering By lovemylibrary This collection wasn't bad, it just didn't live up to its name. I enjoy NPR, have sat in the driveway several times listening to the end of a story on the radio that I didn't want to miss. Most of these weren't them. This collection seems to be a gathering of the easiest at hand NPR stories that had some relation to a winter holiday. Again, not a bad group of stories, just needs to be renamed "NPR's Random Grouping of Holiday Stories." Not purchase worthy.

David Sedaris contributes his now classic Santaland Diaries, his account of his experiences playing Santa's little helper at Macy's in New York. Susan Stamberg sneaks her mother-in-law's recipe for cranberry relish onto the air again. Storyteller Kevin Kling finds an invitation to participate in a production of The Nutcracker too tempting to resist. Ghanian-born commentator Meri Danquah shares her thoughts on Kwanzaa. Cowboy poet Baxter Black describes a Christmas cookie with the denseness of an anvil and the half-life of a radial tire. Robert Siegel goes in search of the correct spelling for December's Jewish holiday. The Thanksgiving tables are turned on unsuspecting Bostonians in When Turkeys Attack. And more.

What a holiday gift from NPR. The Providence Journal
